Are you wondering about some of the places that CircleTalk™ happens?

Dear Colleagues,

We think you will be interested in a few places that CircleTalk™ has created a social space for older adults who, otherwise, would not have a way to connect regularly with others in a comfortable and meaningful way. Who doesn't want to be known and know others and have way to establish new friends during these times? Check it out.

CircleTalk™ at PACE

PACE programs provide customized healthcare and social engagement to older adults to help them stay independent. Most of us want to age in place. We want to grow older in our own homes and communities. CircleTalk™ has increased the likelihood that, when a person comes to a PACE location, they will be able to become a part of a small group, a chance for belonging and for new, satisfying relationships. These are so, so important if a person lives alone. Thank you PACE for offering a complete package to sustain well-being!

CircleTalk™ at Jewish Family Service-Generation Tech

In a 3-way collaboration, the students at Denver's Cherry Creek High School are bridging generational divides by bringing tech abilities to JFS older adults and then getting to know each other, virtually, by being in a circle together! Students and adults engage in pairs by learning about their devices, the internet and other tech capabilities. Then, multiple pairs join each other in CircleTalk™ to do some meaningful personal connecting! This is a win-win model from beginning to end. Students learn to facilitate groups and adults learn how to utilize technology as they make new (older and younger) friends.

CircleTalk™ at AGE WELL Center Boulder

At the AGE Well Center in Boulder, Colorado, the mission is to inspire and empower older adults to age well through community connection, learning, and play. AGE WELL has used their vast network of adults (who frequented the center prior to Covid) to initiate smaller social enjoying the rich conversation-based program and feeling a part of something again!

What else is possible? The potential for bringing CircleTalk™ to people anywhere is possible now that we can train new leaders or connect your organization with CircleTalk™ program leaders to create new, virtual social spaces to gather and engage!
